

I loved working on our website, I think it was a great learning process and I had a lot of fun as we moved on. I had more fun with our Google websites because it was easier and more interesting. Dreamweaver was much harder and stressful. I found it to be more complicated, but I love working on websites and think it's a great skill to learn and also to build on for sure. Working with partners is a good idea but maybe not all the time. With partners we seem to get off task and lose time and I think Google is not too hard so we should be able to do it ourself because if we need help we can just ask each other and we would be fine. I hated html with a passion it was torture for me because it made everything difficult for no reason at all, it had its upsides but to get to the upside you had to go through the overly long bad side.
